

Learning for life

An Age of learning and searching for that new experience amidst the busy day of our everyday life, it's the time where you find your true self amidst the passing of times. This is such times and this is my story. I wake up in the morning looking outside to feel the wind blowing brushing against my face and the familiar warmth of sunshine at my face waking me up from a good night rest. I prepare myself for a new day expecting something from the first day at school.

The day always starts with learning and it also ends with learning and absorbing everything you do for the day, that's what we do here in Mingchuan. Mingchuan school is built on the mountain right next to the city and so every student and teacher in the school is required to walk stairs to go up to their classes. Arriving at the school I find in front of the stairs looking to my right and left I saw my fellow students chatting and walking through the long stairs, the sound of boots tapping against the floor, beside you a few posters announcing the students of event that are happening around the school.

The first day I come to school I find myself in a line of people waiting in nervousness as they are being checked for their temperature, a dangerous creature not living and also not dead of a small size something not visible to the eye has spread to the world. I thought to myself as I walk the stairs How great is Taiwan preparedness and their fast action of their citizen to be able to prepare for such a disaster.

You sit in your class waiting for the teacher to come in the morning. You said hi to your friends as they come and look for seats in the class talking about their stories of what happened recently to them and talking about what recently happened in the world. and as I talk with my friends I saw an insect a size of a pinky finger wondering around from the window interrupting the students with their talk harassing them and then you start wondering how does such a small creature can make a large impact on the class, I wonder if I can also do the same to world so I renew my resolution to start preparing to enter the big world and make an impact so my name can be known to the world.

Break time has arrived my friends and I have decided to eat curry at school This food is not the best food in school but it has that curry flavor which makes us want to eat it more. Now We walk to the curry stand and order. One of the things I hate about this curry stand is that it takes a long time to make their food so all of us after ordering the food, will proceed to find a seat downstairs around place that looks like a small cliff around the big tree, and in all honesty, I think this is one of the best seats for lunch in school and that's because of 2 things First, is that the big trees can actually cover us from the sun while the Second one is the wind blowing away our stress from continuous study.

After school I go to the school gym located beside the field, as it's important for all people to work out at least once a day for as little as 30 minutes to maintain good health and a good mind. It's a considerably small gym which can only fit around 20 people and it's also open for only a specific time but one advantage of the school gym is the price, for students like us money is actually the main problem for our daily lives.

At the end of the day, we finish everything I go home to study what I have learned for the day this is the part where I say I end my day with studying and checking out the classes for tomorrow. This is my life as a student at Mingchuan University.
